

A public dialogue

on the Canada-EU free trade agreement Tuesday, October 18, 2011

An ninth and possibly final round of Canada-European Union free trade negotiations takes place in Ottawa from October 17 to 21. The Harper government has made it clear that CETA – the Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement – is an important part of the Conservative’s economic action plan. But at what cost to social, economic and environmental policy? Opposition parties are starting to raise questions about CETA at trade committee and in the media. Meanwhile, public skepticism about the deal is growing in Canada, Quebec and the European Union. Join us for a free public discussion on the Canada-EU trade negotiations with Members of Parliament. Simultaneous translation will be provided.

WHO:

Robert Chisholm,
NDP trade critic

Wayne Easter,
Liberal trade critic

Elizabeth May,
leader of the Green Party of Canada

André Bellavance,
Bloc Québécois trade critic

WHERE:

Ottawa Public Library
Main Branch
120 Metcalfe Street,
Ottawa
3:30 – 5 p.m.

For more information
write
TJN.RCJ@gmail.com
or rjqic@ciso.qc.ca

This is a free event and no RSVP is required.

Trade Justice Network
Réseau pour le commerce juste

INSTITUTE OF
POLITICAL ECONOMY,
CARLETON UNIVERSITY